THE AUDITORIUM.

The bill which opened here Monday the first half of the present week a one of high class vaudeville nums and a splendid line of motion tures, and altogether it made a set favorable impression on the ge houses which greeted its open.

"His Roommate," the farce medy college phylet, presented by therine Cronin and company, filled a headline place in a very satisfacty manner and had the house reaming with laughter at the bright les and amusing situations, which a through the entire act in rapid occasion. Delmore and Oneida ade a decided hit with their novelty such act, consisting of artistic posing the Japanese balancing pole. The twas a distinctive novelty and mething which has never been inoduced here before. A very dainty nging comedienne is Miss Paulinarry, who was also on the bill, introcking new and catchy song hits of a latest type, while Billy Cole, the amp monologuist, comes in for a set of the control of a populause.

THE VILLAGE POSTMASTER.

The Poli Players are preparing to resent for next week only one of the est rural dramas that can be had. The llage Postmaster. This production ill be notable for several reasons, pardarly because it offers a couple of cial features seen in no other play because the machinery and effects for these features is the same used in the original New is used in the original New York oduction having been secured espeally for this one week in Norwich, and of these effects is a rainstorm of all water that breaks up a village lebration and sends all the particulate, including the silver cornet band.

FUETRY

THE CALL OF THE WINDS.

The secret of the Spring to gain.

"Oh, this is Life, to strive and fight
With greater odds than we can bring!
To strain and work and war for Right
And still to keep the soul of Spring!
To fall, but never to despair—
To keep a brave face to the foe,
Glad-heartedly the combat dare
With any of the winds that blow!"

The Spring winds skirl across the moor.

And ever in my ears there rings
The call of Youth to splendid war
Beneath the flag of noble things!
And, with a laugh, to conflict strung,
Steadfast, I face what Life may bring:
For. oh, 'tis lovely to be young
And hear the battle ery of Spring'
—C. P. Rayden.

When out the Fast shot morning's rosiest light.
And life itself was changed to verdant thing.
The air crisp-spun into a sheer delight;
With every leaf athrill with whispering
The new loves born with every moon of night;
And every dove its secret fluttering, Did sweetness still, with looked-for sweets, unite.

And every day was as a ne A new soul wakened to the heaven of things,
To celebrate new glory of the morn.
With rapture beating its perpetual wings,
But with you gone, all in my soul
was night—
The sconce wherein the day burned out its light.
